Livestock interventions in low-income countries: a theory of change for improved nutrition

Johanna Lindahl\textsuperscript{1,2,3}, Florence Mutua\textsuperscript{1}, Delia Grace\textsuperscript{1}

\textsuperscript{1} International Livestock Research Institute \textsuperscript{2} Swedish University of Agricultural Sciences \textsuperscript{3} Uppsala University, Sweden
Livestock intervention
- Improved nutrition
- Reduced disease
- Better breeds

Improved production
- More products for sell
- More food
- Reduced costs

Improved livelihoods
- Better health
- Less stunting
- Higher resilience

Assumption 1: The intervention is feasible and people change their behavior

Assumption 2: The intervention actually leads to improved production

Assumption 3: The increased gains translates into more and better food